Tour Information

Introduction

This week long itinerary is centred around one of the least visited and most pristine ecosystems in the world; the Russian state of Primorye may not evoke the same thoughts and emotions as Siberia. But it is this state which harbours the largest areas of intact and protected forests in the Russian Far East. Many parks and reserves have been set up in the last 10-20 years. Mostly down to the love of the big cats and the wilderness that Vladimir Putin has. The rewards for setting up these protected areas, increasing the anti-poaching enforcement and awareness of the problems facing the big cats here are beginning to be seen now. The numbers of both Siberian tigers and Amur leopards have been slowly yet steadily increasing for years.

In a world that is suffering with decreasing numbers of big cats, whether it is for the illegal Chinese traditional medicine market, illegal pet trade, illegal fur trade or retribution killings from local people who suffer livestock and human predations at the hands of big cats; there are many problems resulting in decreasing populations around the world. It is remarkably refreshing that there is some good news for the tiger and leopard here in the harshest and least typical habitat that these adaptable cats inhabit.

However despite this good news and it is true that the numbers are steadily increasing, the number of wild Amur leopards is pitifully low. The last census suggested an increase in the total population by around 50% which is incredible, but this only meant an increase to around 80 individuals that now live in the Russian Far East and just over the border of China. This is a massive increase from around 27 when the national park or Kedrova Pad and Land of Leopard were set up in 2007.

Obviously being such a rare and elusive animal we cannot guarantee a sighting of the leopard on this trip, all we can do is place you in the best place at the best time and hope that the spirit of the Russian Far East materialises out of the frozen wilderness for you.

This tour is a pioneering tour and you will be amongst the first ever tourists to come here and the first to spend time here during the wonderful winter time to try and find and photograph the Amur leopard.

Because of the nature of Amur leopards we cannot guarantee any sightings; however we can assure you all of an adventure of a life time and one that could result in you becoming one of the only non-Russian people to see wild Amur leopards!

We had great success on our first ever trip with clients here in February 2018 where the clients saw two different Amur leopards and got pictures and videos of both individuals. The first was a pregnant female in the day time (10am) and the second was a large adult male who came and fed on the deer all night, we got great viewings over several hours, fascinating behaviour and pictures and videos from both camera traps and night vision – which is available at the hide on request. And on our second trip (March 2018) we had an Amur leopard visit the hide area, which means a 100% success rate so far in leopard sightings for our trips here.

In November 2018 we continued our great success with sightings of a male and female leopard around the hide. The female is believed to also have a litter of young cubs and we hope by late winter 2018-19 the cubs will be following the female around and possibly visiting the hide too.

Itinerary

Day 1	Vladivostok / Kedrova Pad National Park	Arrival
Accommodation: Kedrova Pad National Park (Forestry Hotel)	Food: Depending on the time of arrival a light lunch / snacks will be provided and then dinner at the hotel.	Transportation: Private Vehicle

Today you will be met at the airport by your guide / interpreter and taken to the national park (~3 hours). On arrival here we will settle into the log cabin / hotel (it has large apartments which we will share) and have some food, we will meet the park rangers and have a briefing about the park, the hide and the way the photography hide operates here. If time allows (the days are short and the nights long here during winter) we will have a guided walk around some of the forest to look for wildlife and evidence of the elusive leopard. Tomorrow will be your first day in the hide.

Days 2-7	Kedrova Pad National Park	Amur Leopard Photography
Accommodation: Kedrova Pad National Park (Forestry Hotel)	Food: Breakfast and dinner will be served at the hotel and you will take some snacks into the hide – however smelly foods are not a good idea in the hide.	Transportation: Walking

For the next 6 days you will have access to the hide. The hide accommodates 3 people, there are two bunks and one folding camp bed for sleeping and we recommend people spend the entire time (all 5 nights inside the hide). There is a toilet, gas heater and we will provide lots of food (we will bring food regularly and you will be in radio contact with the main accommodation). We recommend staying inside the hide the entire time and maybe receiving one folding camp bed for sleeping and we recommend people spend the entire time (all 5 nights inside the hide). There is a toilet, gas heater and we will provide lots of food (we will bring food regularly and you will be in radio food deliveries every 2 days as this will dramatically decrease the disturbance around the hide and thus increase the chances of the leopard (there are 3-5 leopards that are currently using the area around the hide according to camera traps) coming around. The location of the hide was chosen to take advantage of natural features (water sources and the popular food trees utilised by the wild boar and deer species here) so that the ungulate animals naturally like to spend time here during the winter. The high density of prey animals around here increased the chances of leopards using the area too. To further increase our chances the area has been baited with salt and other minerals as well as grain for up to 2 months prior to our arrival. This is done just for us and is done in the hope that it will increase the presence of the prey animals and therefore the leopards ahead of our arrival.

The hide has been in use on and off for a number of years, most notably in 2007 when the BBC Planet Earth team came here and filmed wild Amur leopards for the very first time. From then until 2015 the hide was used sporadically by the occasional wildlife photographer and film crew. But in general the area was unknown and very difficult to arrange a visit too. Now the hide is open to tourists and Royle Safaris has managed to negotiate the use of the hide on our tours. With the success we have had on our Siberian tiger tours we believe that this is the perfect extension and hope to further show case this species and its stunning habitat to help increase awareness and raise much needed funds which goes the national park and surrounding communities to create a positive association with the wildlife and their continued survival.

In fact on our very first tour here in February 2018 we had success and a sighting and photographs of two Amur leopards.
